Police Surround Gdansk Yard As Strikes Spread in Poland

By Jackson Diehl

Washington Past Service
GDANSK, Poland - Thousands of striking workers led by the Solidarity union chairman, Lock Walesa, were surrounded by riot police in the Lenin Shipyard here Tuesday night as more strikes empted in Poland and the government of General Wojciech Jaruzelski admitted increasing difficulty in handling the situation.

Following a day of rallies and speeches by Mr. Walesa before the gate of the Lenin Shipyard, policemen surrounded the yard and blocked nearby streets.

The display of force came as crowds assembled in churches in Gdansk for masses. The police seemed intent on stopping any attempt by Solidarity supporters to march on the shipyard, but Mr. Walesa warned they could also move to end the two-day old strike

They could come here at any time. They can come and they can go," Mr. Walesa told a cheering crowd inside the shipyard, occupied Tuesday afternoon by some of its employees. "But it won't solve anything," he added.

The miners said 1,000 of the 7,000 employees struck, but the mine manager said 95 percent of the employees were working.

An 8-day-old strike by steel-workers in Nowa Huta, near Krakow, also continued Tuesday. Efforts by authorities to reopen talks with a committee of strikers after a five-day break failed, and state television quoted the manager of the operation as describing the situ-

"The strikes that are currently under way and the ones that are being provoked do not threaten socialism in Poland, which has strong roots in the country, but they threaten reforms," Mr. Urhan said. He repeated government arguments that the strike wave is undermining attempts by the govern-ment to liberalize the economy and political life.

Despite calls for dialogue by Mr. Walesa, the government does not intend to open talks with Solidarity, Mr. Urban said, because "the government will not talk to illegal structures, and Solidarity is an illegal structure."

He added, however, "We might talk in individuals who were in Solidarity, but not Solidarity as a

2 Countries Argue Over Hijacking

By Edward Cody

Washington Past Service PARIS - Kuwaiti and Algerian officials are arguing over terms of the bargain that led to freedom for 31 hostages aboard a Kuwait Airways impho jet, as well as for their hijackers, who remain in Algeria, official sources said.

The Algerians apparently made some type of commitment to seek a Knwaiti decision to reduce the sentences of five of 17 extremists imprisoned in Knwait since 1983, and the Algerian-Kuwaiti disagreement focuses on this point, the sources

The sources said it remains unclear exactly what level of commit-ment the Algerian authorities made in negotiating for release of the hostages. But they said that Kuwaiti and Algerian officials have been arguing over what each side lighter sentence for the five prison-

Publicly, Kuwait contends that it made no deal to free the 31 hostages, all of them Kuwain citizens. The Associated Press quoted U.S. officials in Washington last week as saying that during the bar-gaining with the hijackers the Kuwaitis had pledged to release some of the prisoners before their sentences expire but that the government "probably had no intention of letting them go early," as one of the officials put it.

The 17 prisoners were impris-oned for the 1983 bombings of the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait, as well as Kuwain government installations. Throughout the 16-day hijacking of Kuwait Airways Flight 422 — during stops in Meshed, Iran; Larnaca, Cyprus; and Algiers — the hijackers de-manded freedom for the 17. The hijackers, who seized the plane April 5 during a flight from Bang-kok to Kuwait, killed two of the passengers in Cyprus.

The masked hijackers, believed to number nine, were whisked away in unmarked vehicles shortly before dawn on April 20 at Houari Boumédienne Airport in Algiers as part of the agreement with the Algerian authorities to end the ordeal.

In Boom-Town Spirit, Las Vegas Goes on a Building Binge

By Richard W. Stevenson

New York Times Service LAS VEGAS, Nevada — The real high rollers on the gaudy, neon-lighted Strip these days do not have dice or cards in their hands. They are holding blueprints.
The owners of Las Vegas's hotel-casinos have embarked upon a building spree that is unprecedented even for a town that has enjoyed three decades of virtually uninterrupted growth and that prides itself on its boom-town mentality.

Just a few years after some doomsayers predicted that competition from Atlantic City, New Jersey, among other things, would spell the end of Las Vegas's heyday, new resorts are being built or planned up and down the Strip.

The owners of existing hotel-casinos are working (everishly to add new rooms. On one choice parcel of land, Golden Nugget Inc.'s new 3,000-room resort complex is beginning to take shape. A few traffic lights away, Circus Circus

Enterprises is working on plans for a 3,000-room hotel-casino, its second on the Strip.

Nearby, the Riviera Hotel and Casino, which is owned by Meshulam Riklis and which emerged from bankruptcy proceedings only a few years ago, is adding almost 2,800 rooms. Hilton Hotel Corp.'s Flamingo Hilton is adding I,600 rooms and Holiday Corp.'s Holiday Inn is adding 2.300.

That is only a sampling. If all the projects in the planning or building stages are completed, more than 20,000 new hotel rooms will open in the next several years, a 33 percent increase over the 60,000 available now. Even if, as some analysis expect, only half the plans come to fruition, the number of new rooms will still be greater than all those currently available in Atlantic City.

Some analysis see a danger that the city could become overbuilt with hotel rooms, especially if the U.S. economy pace of recent years. But casino operators, like gamblers on a roll, see nothing but certain payoffs for their expansion

There is plenty of reason for the optimism. The number of visitors to Las Vegas increased 37 percent between 1981 and last year, pushing hotel occupancy rates to 83.3 percent in 1987 from 75.7 percent in 1981, despite the addition of pearly 9,000 rooms in that period.

There is some justification for all the building because business has been strong and the outlook is pretty favorable for the next year or two," said Harold Vogel, an analyst at Merrill Lynch Capital Markets. "But one does get the impression that there is too much happen-

Industry executives and some analysts dismiss such warnings, noting that many top-class botels are regularly booked solThey argue that many of the casinos that are expanding or huilding will be better positioned than rivals if a downturn does occur, since new facilities would tend to attract those gamblers who do come to town. Perhaps more important, the industry leaders say they learned a lot from the early 1980s, when they faced a recession, the opening of gambling in Atlantic City and airline deregulation that resulted in fewer direct flights to Las Vegas. Indeed, casinos have become better at marketing themselves domestically and abroad. Some, such as Circus Circus. have shown that polyester-clad gamblers who arrive in campers can be as profitable as the silk-shirt crowd that highroller establishments like Caesars Palace and the Golden Nugget fly in on their corporate iets.

"We truly believe Vegas can absorb all 'this building," said Arthur S. Waltzman, who was installed by Mr. Riklis as president of the Riviera after predecessors overexpanded just before the last recession, leading to the casino's bankruptcy filing. "But we're going to have to man-age it skillfully and market it well." This time, he said, the Riviera is not getting in over its head financially. He would not specify how much the Riviera is spending to expand, but he said the company was not taking on external debt. PARIS - "He doesn't have the look of a president," said the Gaullist legislator, brutally can-did. "The French want to be reassured, and Chirac does not reas-

A little disloyally, the legislator was trying to explain why his nominal boss, Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, was going to be beaten in the election Sunday by President François Mitterrand, a 71-year-old Socialist.

An air of imminent defeat hangs over France's conservative camp, and the main question seems to be whether Mr. Chirac will be submerged in a Mitterrand landslide or be able to register a respectable 48 percent to 49 percent of the vote.

This campaign for the French presidency has been an intensely personal one, and, as politicians and journalists analyze the aichemy of failure and success, they return insistently to human qualities in the restless Mr. Chirac that apparently have repelled poten-tial voters. In the first round of balloting on April 24, the prime minister drew only 19.9 percent of the vote, compared with the presi-

Such analyses are often preceded by praise for the prime minister, who has been a Promethean campaigner and, according to veteran Chirac watchers, has succeeded in sanding down the rough edges of an abrasive, impulsive personality. It is a little thing, but Mr. Chirac no longer wags an accusing finger at television cameras but instead forms thumb and forefinger into a miniature "O."

Even those hostile to Mr. Chirac concede that he put in a first-class performance in a televised debate Thursday -- "his best ever," in the words of a top Mitterrand adviser - and that he marshaled arguments effectively and often threw the president on the defensive. But, a day later, opinion polls called Mr. Mitterrand the victor.

"Chirac led the debate, he asked the questions, and Mitter-rand answered them," said Jean-Michel Goudard, a key Chirac consultant. "He looked physically at ease, looking at the French through the cameras while Mitterrand looked as if he was not talking to the French. But, in the end, it appears Chirac did not win this

In the televised encounter, Mr. Mitterrand, though often short for arguments, managed to radiate dignity and calm, which buffered and absorbed Mr. Chirac's faintly aggressive energy. "Chirac was sitting with his feet crossed and one of them was tapping a frenetic tempo for two hours," said the Mitterrand adviser, who witnessed the debate in the studio. "There is a problem of inner serenity."

French journalists who have covered Mr. Chirac for many years say that he is charming and relaxed in private, but that a timid streak turns into a brittle combativeness when he is confronted with a television camera.

Paul Amar, a television commentator and author of a new book called "Freud at the Elyraised as a "perfect child" by a mother who had lost an earlier son in childbirth, and that the politician has been obsessed by a need for perfection. "If he lacks this screnity, it is because he is always running after a perfect universe," said Mr. Amar.

Franz-Olivier Giesbert, who has written biographies of both candidates, recalled in an interview that Mr. Mitterrand himself took a long time to shake off the image of an overambitious opportunist, an image that clings today to Mr. Chirac

"He is too young to have the image of a president of the republic," said Mr. Giesbert of the 55year-old prime minister. "He needs to have a pot belly and a little white hair, to take his time, to go for walks. He is the Mitterrand of the right, and he is going to have a long crossing of the

After following Mr. Chirac on the campaign trail, Patrick Jar-reau, a journalist for Le Monde, said in a conversation that the prime minister had "evolved a lot and softened his image." But the reporter said that Mr. Chirac still appeared to many French to be someone who does not have his own independence and his own personality" and that he remained under the influence of powerful men like Finance Minister Edouard Balladur and Interior Minister Charles Pasqua.

Such colleagues will become even more influential if Mr. Chirac is routed on Sunday. In defeat, if that is what awaits him, he will have to fight to keep con-trol of his demoralized neo-Gauliist party, Rally for the Republic. But, as mayor of Paris, he will be able to conduct this fight from the elegant confines of City Hall.

The body of the priest, the Reverend Albert Khreish, was recovered Sunday from the wooded hills near the Christian port of Junich, 22 kilometers (14 miles) north of Beirut. He was kidnapped from his home in the same area by unknown gunmen a week earlier.

The police said the 53-year-old priest was shot 30 times and that his face was stashed.

The motive for the killing, including any political explanation, was not known. Some Christians said the killing was part of the growing conflict between rival Christian factions as the presidential election approaches.

U.S. Escorts Another Gulf Convoy

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The third convoy of U.S. flagged Kinwaiti tankers in five days headed up the Gulf on Tuesday as the U.S. Navy tried to make up for lost time due to a mine threat and naval classics.

The convoy got under way as Admiral William H. Crowe Jr., chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, arrived in the Gulf to inspect navy operations and confer with senior officers. Admiral Crowe also was to meet with top officials of Arab governments in the Gulf to outline new U.S. policy that permits U.S. warships to aid non-U.S. flag vessels under

China Population Could Surpass Goal

BEIJING (Reuters) — Population growth in China will overshoot its official target for the year 2000 by 87 million people if present birth trends continue, a United Nations population expert said Tuesday.

Prod Laquian, a Beijing-based representative of the UN Fund for Population Activities, told an international family planning conference that the population of China could reach I.287 billion by the end of the century, compared with a government target of 1.2 billion. At the end of last year, the population was officially estimated at 1.085 billion.

The birthrate has risen during the last two years as "baby boomers" born in the 1960s reach child-bearing age, a trend expected to continue until 1995, Mr. Laquian said. Government officials have said a slackening of the strict one-child-per-family policy in rural areas also is a factor.

New York Times Service CLEVELAND - With Governor Michael S. Dukakis the overwhelming favorite in the Democratic primary here Tuesday, the campaign turned into a dress rehearsal of the general election campaign as Mr. Dukakis and Vice President George Bush exchanged barbs and challenges.

A CONTROL OF THE CONT Mr. Bush, as he has been doing in the last week, linked the Democratic candidates to the record of former President Jimmy Carter. The country wants to move ahead. not go back to the misery we inherited through the very policies Jackson and Dukakis are talking about," Mr. Bush said.

Mr. Dukakis, the governor of Massachusetts, continued to assail the Reagan administration, and by extension Mr. Bush. He singled out Attorney General Edwin Meese 3d. who has been investigated for own-ership of telecommunications stocks while in a position to make policy affecting the industry, his connection with a proposed Iraq-Jordan pipeline project and allega-tions he improperly helped Wedtech Corp. obtain government contracts.

This administration has broken the law," Mr. Dukakis said Monday, "I think the vice president has to address the issue."

. But the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, refusing to treat the Democratic race as over, asserted on Monday that neither Mr. Dukakis nor Mr. Bush, who clinched the Republican presidential nomination last week, were addressing the federal budget deficit and other important issues.

Stepping up his criticism of Mr. Dukakis, who was ahead of him by a 3-to-1 ratio in polls for the Ohio primary, Mr. Jackson said the press had been unduly kind to Mr. Dukakis by failing to examine his positions on issues.

The 159 Democratic delegates at stake in the Ohio primary are the most of the three contests scheduled for Tuesday. Indiana has 79 delegates, and the District of Co-numbia has 16, But the Ohio campaign is also seen as important because of the role the state has played in past general elections.

The Ohio vote has been within 2.2 percentage points of the national popular vote in every election since 1964, and the state has voted with the winner in all but two of the Jast 23 presidential elections.

For his part, Mr. Bush, campaigning in Dayton, Ohio, sought to dismiss questions about ethics in . the Reagan administration by endorsing an ethics hilk before Con-

"I'm not going to get into the Meese thing," Mr. Bush said. In his effort to move the issue to a different plane, the vice president endorsed the ethics in government bill sponsored by Senator Strom Thurmond, Republican of South Carolina. Among its goals, the bill is designed to restrict dealings between former government officials and government agencies. Mr. Bush pointed out that the bill also would cover members of Congress. Some Republicans hope their party can minimize the dam-age of what has become known as "the sleaze factor" by raising questions about the behavior of Democratic Party leaders in Congress.

With Mr. Dukakis virtually assured of the Democratic nomination, he and Mr. Bush have offered previews of their fall campaigns by dential speeches and announce attacking each other. But Mr. Jackments, the former White House son said both have failed to offer chief of staff, Donald T. Regan. details about their programs.

In Parma, a suburb of Cleveland, Mr. Jackson asserted that the news media had neither examined Mr. Dukakis's positions closely enough nor sought to contrast the views of the two remaining active Democratic candidates.

Mr. Jackson also alleged that Mr. Dukakis has not backed np campaign promises by specifying how he will obtain the money to implement them.

The comments by Mr. Jackson and his remarks in the last few days suggest the Ohio primary campaign may mark a new phase in the Democratic contest, one in which Mr. Jackson tries to force Mr. Dukakis to make specific commitments to liberal positions, including cuts in the military budget.

An aide to Mr. Jackson said that with Mr. Dukakis increasingly using a centrist line on issues, the Jackson campaign hopes that its candidate's call for specifics will appeal to white liberals in the Oregon and California primaries. Mr. Jackson hopes to upset Mr. Dukakis in California, which votes on dicated daily newspaper advice col-June 7, the day of the last major primaries.

Like most members of Congress from New York, Representative Charles B. The measure will not affect goods shipped into Suffolk County already packed in plastic, such as medical supplies and packaged means. The measure is believed to be the most farreaching of its kind in the United States in curbing the use of products that are not biodegradable. In 1981, Suffolk became the first county in New York state to ban no-deposit, no-return soda bottles, and this led to a statewide ban.

Expansion in the Gulf

In an engagement on April 18 after an American frigate had hit a freshly laid mine in the Gulf, the U.S. Navy knocked out a large root of Israel and Israe large part of Iran's navy. This double showing of Iranian naval provocation and Ameriin naval effectiveness has now emboldened the United States to spread wider its protective umbrella over shipping in the Gulf.

Previously the U.S. Navy protected only ships under the American flag, including 11 Kuwaiti tankers. European navies cared for ships under their flags. This left exposed two classes of ships in whose passage Washing-ton has an economic or political interest: U.S.-owned tankers flying flags of convenience (Panama, Liberia) and ships serving friendly pro-Iraq Gulf states (Saudi Arabia, Kuwait). The two classes have come under Iranian fire, and their owners have been pleading for protection for some time.

So now the United States will be performing, much less selectively than before, the traditional naval function of responding to appeals of ships in distress — and, by making ready to aid them, of deterring some attacks on them. Does this mean an indiscriminate widening of the American role in a war which, after nearly eight years, still defies pause, let alone settlement?

The Reagan administration, which reports that it consulted closely with Con-

It also says that the new mission can be handled without sending more ships. And it quietly, and nervously, hopes that the Europeans, too, will decide to extend their protection beyond ships of their own flags. The French have already begun to do so. It takes some getting used to that Ameri-can-owned ships that fled to a foreign flag to avoid American maritime unioo wages can now slip in uoder the wing of the U.S. Navy. Just as concern grows about such war practices as using chemical gas and raining missiles on cities, moreover. Iraq receives a booo: Tankers sailing to belligerent Iran will oot be protected, while ships carrying Iraq's cargoes — the war loog ago disahled belligerent Iraq's ports — will be. And the United States, even as it roots the new policy in respect for "freedom of oavigation in internatiooal waters," continues to avoid applying this principle to Soviet-bloc shipping.

We do not say that these and other considerations add up to reason to reject the oew policy. But they do underline the priority of ending the fighting - a goal still oot within sight.

Now, it appears, the damage to the environment's delicate fabric extends to the ocean's nurseries, including the waters of Long Island Sound, the poisons will certainly be greater. Meanwhile, too, it becomes increasingly clear that the Canadians' best hope now may lie not with an indifferent administration but with Congress. It is considering amendments to the Clean Air Act to require sharp reductions in the waste gases that cause acid rain.

Some might argue that an election year is a poor time to enact laws that will inevitably cost industry, and probably consumers, a lot of money. But the cost will be no less in the future, and the toll exacted by these airborne

Some are so upset by the very idea that in conscientious horror they deny it. Why of course there are issues know it is easy to pander to the passionate troubling most Americans, letter writers to partisans who turn out for primaries, but The New York Times insist, and the thing to do is press the candidates to address them.

For all the good citizenship, there is not New York primary electorate, as shown by without much partisan baggage. exit polls in 1984 and 1988, offers a dramatic illustration. In 1984, when voters were asked which issues they thought to be important, their answers seemed normal. Controlling ouclear weapons was near the top, mentioned by 32 percent. But in 1988, defense issues were mentioned only by 10 percent. What was the most important issue this year?

Drugs, mentioned by 36 percent.
Drugs? Drug abuse has rightly become a powerful concern - but is it truly of so much greater concern than ouclear weapons? Likewise, in 1984, economic issues worried voters much more than this year. But the New York unemployment rate was 7.7 percent then, and oow it is down to 3.8 percent.

What this seems to add up to, bluntly, is peace and prosperity. Times are tough for some Americans, many of whom march behind Jesse Jackson's banner. But for many, the reason the drugs issue tops the list is that the life-and-death, bread-and-butter concerns that usually go first have lost their fire.

There are other reasons for the absence of campaign issues. One is multiple candidates. Voters, unable to keep candidates' positions straight, joked about a dozen "dwarfs." The candidates offered little contrast. The prime issue, said Bob Dole, was controlling the budget deficit, and he would

The candidates commbute to the no-issues atmosphere. They and their managers wiser to avoid partisan positions that can be fatal in the general election campaign. It is a mark of Michael Dukakis's skill that he is yet much evidence to support the horror. The headed for the Democratic nomination

The media and the format of the campaign television networks say, with justice, that they have broadcast more issues discussions than ever before. Yet they also five with a built-in predilection for melodrama. The successive weeks of the campaign have seen a familiar repertoire of conflict themes: favorite vs. underdog, conservative vs. liberal.

But as the primaries wind down and the finals approach, issues are starting to surface. There was not much for Democrats to argue about regarding drugs or national health insurance or the Iran-contra scandal. Republicans found more embarrassment than disagreement when they groped for individual positions on Euromissiles. Now, finally, the campaign is changing. Pennsylvania voters who not long ago found the candidates boring told interviewers that what they liked about Mr. Dukakis was his lack of flash. The Dukakis cover of The Washington Times magazine makes the same point in three words: "Cool Is Hot." Likewise, the candidates and the public are beginning to find and frame issues. When the Democrats and Republicans square off, as candidates Dukakis and Bush are already starting to, plenty of issues will be joined.

Dragging His Critics Along

The unprecedented debate in the Soviet press is a sign both of greater political openness and of the intensity of the power struggle. [Mikhail] Gorbachev's determination is all the more remarkable when one considers that he has just acknowledged a major Soviet foreign policy defeat in Af-ghanistan. Economic growth has also failed to live up to his expectations, and shortages continue; current events in Poland may cause further hesitation. It is remarkable that Mr. Gorbachev remains in control of his attempt to alter Russia's course, and encouraging that he seems to be dragging his conservative critics behind him. - The Daily Telegraph (London).

Boring Times, Boring Men

The American presidency has often been held by dull men, or by men who would have been thought dull were it not for the interesting events in which they were caught up. That is perhaps the explanation of the "bore factor" affecting George Bush [and] his likely Democratic opponent, Michael Dukakis. This year's campaign is taking place in times of peace and prosperity for America. Whoever wins, an envious world will eventually make sure America becomes less peaceful perhaps less prosperous. Either candidate will become more exciting because, sadly, events will become so. America should be grateful for these "bores" while she can.

To Have Peace, Accept the State of Israel

JERUSALEM — There is a clear path to peace in the Middle East, a road that can lead to solooons for Palestinian Arabs and for Israelis. It lies there plain for the world to see.

The road lies in acceptance by the Palestinians and Arab states of the permanent existence of Israel as a nation among nations in the Middle East, place of its birth and roots of its religion. With that acceptance, total and open, almost anything would have been possible for the past 40 years; it still is. Without it, nothing can be achieved but more struggle. The Arabs rejected that road and chose Holy War, that evil conBy A. M. Rosenthal of Palestine as an independent state, demanding all of it. Then they began 40 years of fury — war by arms, war by religious and ra-ness of Arab denunciation of the Jews. Then a sad, strange thing happened. The world became so used to decades of Arab warfare and hatred against Israel that it became inured to them, accepted them as inevitable.

War and hatred twisted the val-ues of the beholders. Much of the world, including friends of Israel, began to regard Arab rejection of Israeli nationhood, the Unholy War and the anti-Jewish rantings as un-derstandable, unchangeable.

Governments glared angrily at Is-God. They refused to accept part the unending Arab vendetta and to but as an accepted reality of Mid-insist on its unquestioned right to exist in the Middle East. Brave little Israel suddenly became "arrogant and intransigent," words that seem reserved for people of a certain per-sussion. The United Nations turned viciously on its child.

This is not simply history but the essence of what is taking place today in Israel, the West Bank and Gaza. The Palestinians have won the admiration of the world by their bravery. But their uprising will fail, because it is withering hope for peace within the only state that can come close to meeting Palestinian aspirations: Israel.

Palestinians demand independence, territory, the very capital of Jerusalem. But, quite incredibly, and chose Holy War, that evil concept of slaughter in the name of rael for being so tiresome as to fear recognize Israel not in the abstract,

Terrorist Today, Statesman Tomorrow

By Karl E. Meyer

N EW YORK — With remarkable speed, yester-day's terrorists turn into today's statesmen. Consider the Middle East rebellion by a stateless people against an occupying army whose soldiers were special targets in a campaign to seize world attention.

The most extreme faction in the uprising was founded by a handsome intellectual with the alias of "Yair." or minator. His creed was encapsulated in fervent verse;

We will wrestle with God and with death ... We will welcome him. Let our blood Be a red carpet in the streets, And on this carpet our brains will be like white lilies . . . Who forever face terror and death In days that are red with carnage and blood, In nights that are black with despair.

Another key figure used clerical disguises and was known as Rabbi Yzertinsky, but his distinctive eyebrows led to his arrest. The arresting officer, Sergeant T. G. Martin, was subsequently killed on a tennis court, a reprisal defended by the suspect he had spotted: I was not consulted about the decision to kill Martin.

But if I had been, I would have approved it ... There are those who say that to kill Martin is terrorism, but to attack an army camp is guerrilla warfare and to bomb civilians is professional warfare. But I think it is the same. "Is it better to drop an atomic bomb on a city than to kill a handful of persons? I don't think so. But nobody says that President Truman was a terrorist ... For us it was oot a question of the professional honor of a soldier, it was the question of an idea, an aim that had to be achieved. We were aiming at a political goal. There are many examples of what we did to be found in the Bible."

group was Lohame Herut Israel or LEHI. The occupiers were the British, who called the group the Stern Gang, Its founder was killed by police in 1942, and "Rabbi" Yzertinsky is now better known as Yitzhak Shamir, Israel's prime minister; his words are quoted in Nicholas Bethel's balanced 1979 study, "The Palestine Triangle."

Desperate days breed desperate doctrines, few more so than that of Abraham Stern. While Churchill's island stood alone against Nazi Germany, Stern insisted that the immediate enemy of the Jews was Britain. To end British occupation, his group was prepared to rob banks, kill suspected informers and assassinate cabinet officials. The Stern group's deeds were condemned by mainstream Zionists. But according to J. Bowyer Bell in "Terror Out of Zion," a 1977 study, their terrorism was more effective than is generally acknowledged. It caught world attention and helped impel the British to withdraw in 1948. In time, Yitzhak Shamir was able to become prime minister by democratic means - as did Menachem Begm, once head of the Irgun, an underground group that competed in violence with the Stern Gang. Now Arabs in Gaza and the West Bank are driven by desperation. There are obvious contrasts. The Stern group operated on the fringe with no support from governments and little from organized Jewry, the Pales-tinians are backed by every Arab state, and the PLO has a budget larger than many members of the United Nations. British-ruled Palestine was a life raft for Jewish refugees fleeing Hitler - hence the fury over Britain's refusal to make room lest in anger Arabs.

Even allowing for differences, how can an Israeli prime minister who once justified murdering British police fail to grasp the passion that drives stateless people to stone occupation soldiers? And given Mr. Shamir's evolution, is it unthinkable that those who now support the PLO may someday be Israel's negotiating partners?

More and more Israelis want ac-commodation with the Palestinians. But since the uprising more Israelis than ever believe that the Palestinians still live in the dark dream of Israel's death. Israelis may be conbarrassed by the violence, but not to the point of suicide.

Yet — the road to peace still exists, open and clear. Israelis have been rethinking their national destiny. It is time Palestinians and the Arab states did some rethinking too. One step could change history: a decision by Arab states, the Pales-tinians and the Palestine Liberation Organization to reject totally the death-to-Israel covenant of the PLO, end the Unholy War and extend complete acceptance to Israel. This will be hard, but only because the simple concept of peace through acceptance rather than destruction of Israel has been so bitterly rejected by Arab politicians for so long. There are Arabs who would accept Israel fully but do not yet have the courage to say so. Arabs have been brave in battle; perhaps they will one day be brave in peace. One Arab was — Anwar Sadat. For this courage he was murdered. But he proved that the Israeli people, even the wary Begins among them, will give land for peace real peace, not a facade behind which the continuation of the Uo-holy War can be plotted. This puts the major initiative where it belongs now, on Arabs who demand Israel give up land and ac-cept heightened vulnerability.

The end of Arab vendetta and acceptance of Israel as a legitimate member of the Middle Eastern community is an entirely reasonable condition for Middle Eastern solutions — and a prerequisite.

Israel responded to Sadat's mission of peace by returning the vast, cherished Sinai, Israel may not melt with immediate gratitude at the Arab offer of total acceptance, so long overdue. But then real negotiations will begin, between Palestinian and Israeli, and among Israelis.

By November, Israelis will hold an election that will amount to a referendum on national policy. The chance is open to the Arabs to become part of that decision by the rationality of acceptance of the Israeli state, not the futility of rising up against it.

Europe's Deadline Accelerates as It Approaches

BRUSSELS — The European Community is finding that the journey toward its goal of becoming a single market for goods and services by 1992 is far from smooth sailing. Nobody ever thought it would be easy, but the scale of the difficulties yet to be overcome is daunting. The strategy behind the drive hy the 12 EC nations to create a single market is simple enough; to revitalize European economies by forging them

The Glory

By Jim Hoagland

PARIS — Thirty years after de Gaulle willed France back into a role in world affairs, the nation is fading as a major player on the inter-national scene. Its energies and atteananonal scene. Its energies and atten-tion are absorbed by muddled do-mestic politics. A coovalescing economy undermines Gaullist glory.

The waning presidential campaign illustrates this down-sizing of French ambitions and capacities. It has been run as a domestic affair, with the carry.

strategy for ending the drift in foreign policy and the stalemate on many do-mestic programs that have characterized the power-sharing arrangement brought about by the defeat of Mr. Mitterrand's Socialist Party in the Mr. Mitterrand has submerged his identification as a Socialist to appeal to the center in this campaign, and appears to be the choice of many voters precisely because he promises to change society the least. It is an election that is being decided on the unedifying hope that with Mr. Mitterrange things will not get worse. Running as the rightful heir to Gaullist tradition, Mr. Chirac failed to identify a new core of beliefs for a modern Ganilism that would attract the kind of broad support that the general drew on in creating the Fifth Republic. As a result, he risks losing not only the election on Sunday but the leadership of the increasingly frag-mented political right.

Mr. Chirac enters Sunday's vote without the endorsement of the extreme-right leader, Jean-Marie Le Pen, who surprised the nation by securing 14.4 percent of the votes cast in the April 24 preliminary vote. Mr. Le Pen characterizes the second-round vote as a choice between "the bad" (Mr. Chirac) and "the worse" (Mr. Mitterrand); this formulation reflects the fact that his score includes a large protest vote against the political establishment for failing to deal persuasive ly with issues such as unemployment and immigration during the campaign. There was also some rebellion i this vote against the way in which Man Chirac and Mr. Mitterrand retreated into vague promises that closer economic economic cooperation in Europe in the future would provide the prosperity and new jobs that are lack-ing today. While the establishment candidates were talking about the fu-ture of a medium-sized country in Western Europe, Mr. Le Pen was talking about France in terms that this part of the electorate recognized. But Mr. Le Pen's vote includes a hard nucleus of voters, perhaps 10 percent of the national total, who now find it respectable to support policies based on anti-Semitism and haired for Arab immigrant workers, and to op-pose openly what de Ganlle stood for in Algeria and even in World War IL.

Gaullism no longer acts simultaneously as a pole of attraction (a France's conservatives and a shame factor for the extreme right, which has suddenly risen from the ashes of its history of collaboration with the Nazis in World War II. The disappearance of Gaullism as a dominant political force opens the way for radical forces to emerge again on the right.
Unless Mr. Mitterrand unexpected-craft a new political order capable of containing this virulent form of the politics of resentment. It is a task that his friend and confident, the writer Jean Daniel, defines as creating a neo-Ganflist Sixth Republic. This is an ambitious and urgent domestic agen-da — which would almost certainly preclude a major international role for France in the foresceable future. The Washington Past

Blaming America's Friends: Democrats Turn Nationalist By Charles Krauthammer

WASHINGTON — When Jeane Kirkpatrick stood up at the 1984 Republican convention and denounced the "San Francisco Democrats" for "blaming America first," she struck a chord. Not just in her Republican audience, but among Democrats who like winning and miss it.

The Democratic Party has tapped many of the great forces of American political life - forces for reform, for social solidarity, for racial equality. But it has gratuitously forfeited the power of American nationalism to Republicans. A sea of flags waving at the San Francis-So convention was an admission of the problem. It was not a solution.

In 1988, the Democrats have found a solution. Instead of blaming America first, they, like the Republicans, have learned to hlame others. But not the traditional hugbear, the Russians, Now that even President Reagan is hooked on détente, the Soviet threat as an election issue is dead.

If not the Russians, who then to blame for America's troubles? Why, the allies, of course. What troubles? The big three: drugs, trade and the deficit. Blame Latin Americans for poisoning America with drugs. Blame Japan and other unfair traders for buying up America. And hlame Europe and Japan for a large part of America's budget deficit because they refuse to bear their fair share of the West's defense burden.

By turning drug abuse, trade and the deficit into foreign policy issues, the Democrats have turned a traditional weakness, softness on defense, into a phis. When the enemy is Colombia, South Korea, or a freeloading NATO. Democrats have no trouble standing tall. By turning the focus of U.S. hostility from the Russians to the allies, the Democrats have become the nationalist party. The beauty of this new foreign policy is that it covers just about every corner of the world, thus satisfying every conceivable form of American xenophobia. No foreign prejudice is left untapped. Drugs cover much of the Third World, with special unloving attention to Mexicans, Colombians and other Latins, Trade covers Japan, South Korea and other Asians, with some opprobrium left over for West Germany, And "burden sharing" covers Europe, though it neatly allows a second free bash at Japan.

Only Australia comes out untouched. (As Randy Newman explained in his pro-nuclear war song, "Political Science": "They all hate us anyhow/ So let's drop the big one now," but "We'll save Australia/ Don't wanna hurt no kangaroo.") does not have the guts to attack the problem domestically. There are only two ways to do that: legalize drug use or truly criminalize it. Right now, Americans toerate an absurd in-between: Adult users are treated either as victims, corrupted by vicious pushers, or patients afflicted with "substance abuse" — in either case, not responsible for their actions. Americans coddle abusers, wink at users, attach more social stigma to smoking than to snorting (try both on a domestic flight of less than two hours and see which one gets you thrown off the plane) - and then blame the consequences on dirt-poor Latins who are doing nothing more than filling U.S. drug orders.

As for foreigners buying up America, they are simply shopping with surplus dollars that they obtained hy selling Americans goods that Americans cannot wait to acquire. Americans buy Hondas for dollars. Japanese then buy pieces of Hawaii, Manhattan and CBS with the proceeds. In a historical irooy American Indians should appreciate, the United States is trading its capital assets for consumer goods. That may be folly, but it is hardly the fault of the foreigners. It is America's choice.

As for the defense budget, the cry now is that Europe and Japan are parasitically living off U.S. protection and the cost is bleeding America dry. Again: no rip-off here, simply another transaction. We pay our money, we get our empire; a front line 4,000 miles from home, access to the world's most advanced economies and technologies, and control of the most coveted geopolitical real estate on the globe. Empire has its costs. It may not be worth the price. But it is hardly forced on America by foreigners.

But how sweet to pretend otherwise, and how popular. So popular that Republicans are rushing to catch up. They are beginning to realize that the Democrats have redefined the terms of the coming foreign-policy debate. By fall, it will not be about the Strategic Defense Initiative or Nicaragua. It will be about dope, foreign investment and "burden sharing." And the general rule is that be who defines the issue, wins the argument Washington Post Writers Group.

These are events that occur every year in every elementary and junior high school in America. You would think that, just once, they would hold an event a child could participate in with no parental guidance, such as a Vicious Teasing Fair or a Hair Spiking Fair or an Ordering an Expensive Restaurant Entree and Then

But no, they condone to have science fairs, in which your child is supposed to do a project that proves some amazing science principle, such as How a Simple Electrical Circuit Works. This is a very popular project. Go to any science fair in the nation, and you'll notice that at least two-thirds of the projects consist of a flashlight battery booked up via wires to a switch and a light bulb.

You the interested onlooker are supposed to throw the switch, thus completing the circuit and causing the light builb to do absolutely nothing, thereby proving the amazing science principle that flashlight batteries do not last very long, espe-cially not in the science fair environment. Too Many Ruffled Feathers

In response to the review of "Ambassador to Paris: The Reagan Years" (April 19):

In 1983 I served in the political section of the Paris emhassy as a State Department intern under Ambassador Evao Galbraith. I was a graduate stu-dent in international relations, struggling to decide between a career io the Foreign Service and one in academics. Galbraith-as-amhassador incarnated what is most chronically wrong with U.S. diplomacy: the incapacity or unwillingness to understand the complexities of host-nation politics, to maintain at least a semblance of public ocutrality vis-à-vis domestic conflicts, and to pursue policy goals through established channels.

Career officers who did know French politics spent far too much of their time . Judging by my own experiences in the embarrassed, baving to clean up after Philippines and the impressions of Filithe ambassador and to smooth the rulfled feathers of an increasingly bostile French administration.

Iran Was Best Left Alone

Representative Les Aspin's appreciation of events in Jran stands in marked contrast to the lack of insight shown by the Reagan administration ("The Gulf. America May Have Misfired," April 23). His views will be welcomed by those who believe that had the Iranian revolution been left to its own devices, there would be much less tension in the Gulf today, and probably no land war.

Angola Talks Open But Pretoria Sees No Quick Solution

By Howell Raines New York Times Service LONDON - Representatives of the United States, South Africa. Cuba and Angola met here Tuesday for what were described as exploratory talks about ending the war in Angola. Western diplomats and South African officials warned against exrecting any sudden breakthrough hased on the peace formula advanced by the U.S. representative in the talks, Chester A. Crocker, the assistant secretary of state for African affairs.

For seven years, Mr. Crocker has heen pushing a plan that calls for withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola in return for the removal of South African forces from South-West Africa, the territory also known as Namibia.

According to diplomatic sources. Mr. Crocker made the first order of business a pledge for all parties to observe a news blackout until the talks are concluded on Wednesday.

Getting the four parties to the conference table for the first time is regarded in London as a diplomatic success for Mr. Crocker, However, analysts and diplomets say that South Africa is unlikely to give way on independence for South-West Africa, close its military hases and end 68 years of control.

On Monday night, President Pieter W. Botha of South Africa said in Cage Town that he wanted to "warn against being too over-optimistic" about the talks,

In London, Neil van Heerden, the deputy foreign Minister of South Africa, stuck to the line that the talks were tentative explora-tions, "We have come to London to see if there is an opening of the diplomatic window in search of peace in Southern Africa," he said

War weariness seemed to be the magnet pulling the parties to the negotiating table. Angola, repre-sented in the talks by Foreign Min-ister Afonso Van-Dunent, is backed by the Soviet Union and 40,000 Cuban troops in its 13-year civil war against the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA, the guerrilla group backed by the United States and South Africa.

Since last fall, South Africa has sent an estimateo 3,000 to 6,000 troops into Angola. They are hogged down in a battle with Angolan and Cuban forces for control of the air base at Cuito Cuanavale.

The Soviet Union, while not participating in the talks, is believed to have signaled its willingness to see a negotiated settleraent when Anatoli Adamishin, the deputy foreign minister, met in London with Mr. Crocker last week.

Angola has proposed a four-year phased withdrawa! of Cuban from Angolan territory, independence for South-West Africa, and an end of U.S. and South African aid to the guerrillas.

South Africa has said that four years is too long a time for the Cuban withdrawal. It has been vague about whether it would respond by pulling out its troops and carrying out a 1978 United Nations resolution providing for the South-West Africa's independence.

South Africa has argued that a pullback from South-West Africa would enable Cuban troops to aid the South-West Africa People's Organization, the nationalist movement within the territory.

CHIHUAHUA. Mexico - His supporters drive cars with bumper stickers proudly identifying them-selves as "Northern Barbarians." And as he campaigns across northern Mexico, Manuel Clouthier makes it clear that nothing would please him more than to topple the political dynasty that has governed Mexico for more than 60 years.

Bearded, burly and blunt-spoken, Mr. Clouthier is the presidential candidate of the right-of-center National Action Party in the election July 6.

But in a country traditionally run from the top down and from the center outward by a monolithic party that describes itself as "revolutionary, his calls for greater freedom of personal choice and less interference by mandarins in Mexico City give this prosperous farmer the aura of a rebel chieftain.

But party faithful believe that Mr. Clouthier, an aggressive, compelling orator and tireless campaigner who was chosen at an open convention in November, will improve that record and could triumpb in honest balloting. A Pollock Nets Nearly $5 Million

TEW YORK - Jackson Poilock's "Scarch," a 1955 painting vibrantly spattered with red, black, green, yellow and white, was purchased at Sotheby's Monday night for $4.8 million, an auction record for the artist and for any postwar artwork.

Applause filled the room when John L. Marion, Sotheby's chair-man and chief auctioneer, brought down his hammer on the purchase by a jubilant Kazuo Fujii of Fujii International, a Tokyo dealer. Fujii purchased the Pollock, one of the last completed before the artist's death in 1956. The Pollock brought $2.57 million last year, which was the record until Mon-

The Pollock that Fujii purchased was sold from the estate of Belle Linsky.

The sale totaled $25.9 million, a record for a sale of contemporary art. Of the 74 works, nine did not sell and six sold for more than $1 million each.

The audience cheered during the dispersal of the Andy Warhol collection of art works.

An untitled 1967 classic black-board painting by Cy Twombly was purchased for $990,000 by Karsten Greve, a dealer from Cologne. The price paid for the Twombly more than doubled the artist's record at auction and was the most expensive work of the nearly 10,000 objects sold to date from the Warhol collection. As of Monday night, the Warhol sale totaled $22.6 million — more than double its estimate - and only 78 offerings had not been sold. Although there were no works by Warhol from his estate, a major 1962 stenciled and handpainted work, "210 Coca-Cola Bottles," the largest of five works on the subject, was sold for $1.43 million, more than double the record for a work by this artist sold at auction.

Among the other records rewritten Monday night; Franz Kline's "Ninth Street" was sold for $1.87

Luci Mitchell-Inness, who heads postwar art sales at Sotheby's, said the anction went "just like gangbusters. Two major lots were pur-Lawn, a sprawling monument to chased by the Japanese buyers, but most of the rest of the artworks were bought by United States collectors and dealers, she said.

A record price at auction was also paid for Richard Diebenkorn's "July," which was sold for $1.2

Mr. Chalasani said the sluggish volume reflected concern over what was happening in the bond market more than fear of computer-driven program trading.

"When bonds go down, that heightens anxiety among equity holders," he said, ooting that the yield on the U.S. Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond had reached 9.13 percent, its highest level in nearly five months.

"That is a cautionary sign for stockholders," Mr. Chalasani said. "And cautionary signals make people go to the sidelines. There is really oo selling pressure or buying pressure in the market right now."

American Electric Power, the most active NYSE issue, added % to 27%. Gillette followed, down 1% to 39%. The company said preliminary results showed it had won a proxy fight with Conistoo Partners, a New York investor group. USG was third, gaining 3% to 44%. The company announced a recapitalization AT&T was up ½ to 27, while IBM rose ½ to 114%. Digital Equipment was up 1% to 106% and Hewlett-Packard gained 1% to 62%.

Among other blue chips, Woolworth was up 3% to 60%, General Electric was off % to 40%. Procter & Gamble rose 1¼ to 77% and Eastman Kodak sained & to 42%.

Procter & Gamble rose 114 to 77% and Eastman Kodak gained % to 42%.

The sets are cued electronically to run commercials as they glide past the product.

The company said the carts would start at about $500 apiece, but volume manufacture should bring that down to around $200. Advertising time will be sold on an exclusive basis for each category. Advertisers will be charged $5 for each 1,000 customers reached, with each cart registering each trip down the aisles.

McGraw-Hill Inc. has suspended publication of Business Week Careers, its five-year-old magazine for college students, because of an inability to attract new advertisers. The closing last week came several months after the company had begun efforts to attract slightly older readers.

The move also came only two weeks after the Washington Post Co. ended publication of its college edition of Newsweek magazine, Newsweek on Campus, and five months after Whittle Communications closed Campus Voice, a 17-year-old quarterly

HESE publishers have found that they really can't get college students to spend much time reading special-interest magazines," said Michael Drexler, the executive vice president for media at the advertising agency Bozell, Jacobs, Kenyon & Eckhardt

Business Week Careers was published seven times a year and had a circulation of 600,000, all but 50,000 of it distributed free in college placement offices. Aimed primarily at college seniors, it gave information for the first-time job seeker.

"We assessed the marketplace and the opportunity did not seem to be growing," said Paul F. McPherson, executive vice president of McGraw-Hill Publications Co.

Krupp To Keep

Steel Company in Ruhr Compromise

DUISBURG, West Germany — The steel giant Krupp Stahl AG, in a compromise response to labor protests, said Tuesday that it would keep its Rheinhausen mill in the Ruhr open at least until the end of 1990 instead of closing it this year.

The announcement followed months of rallies by thousands of Ruhr workers against a Rheinhau-sen shutdown, which threatened 5,300 jobs in a region already suffering from a decade of decline in the face of foreign competition.

The compromise agreement to extend Rheinhausen's life through 1990 provides for the guarantee of 1,500 jobs, less than one-third of the current work force. The premier of North Rhine-shrink, other dealers said. The acquisition of Rowntree by Nestle or Suchard would make the purchaser the West European market leader in chocolate, according to the stockbrokerage Henderson Crosthwaite.

The brokerage estimated that Nestle's share of the European market was around 9 percent, Suchard's 13 percent and Rowntree's 11 percent. Mars Ltd. leads the market with 17 percent.

Analysis see the takeover bid by Nestle as part of a trend toward concentrating the European chocolate industry in fewer hands in readiness for the removal of all harriers to trade within the European Community in 1992.

Cadbury bought the French chocolate maker Chocolat Poulain late last year, while Suchard acquired Belgium's Côte d'Or SA. Community's executive Commission said Tuesday that it had not stock since early February, when it instituted surveillance of the industry as a result of the moves toward further concentration.

The commission's competition directorate monitors EC markets in order to counter monopolistic practices and to ensure that takeovers or commercial agreements do not distort competition.

Cocoa dealers are more worried prospective buyer of Rowntree, because of Suchard's attempts to gain more control over all stages of purchasing, production and retailing.

Axa to Take 25-30% of Midi In Merger Pact

By Jacques Neher Special to the Herald Tribune

PARIS — Compagnie du Midi said Tuesday that under a recently announced merger, Groupe Axa will take 25 percent to 30 percent of Midi's stock, worth an indicated 12.96 billion French francs ($2.27 illion) at current prices. But it added that the two French insurance companies would welcome working with the Italian in-surance group Assicurazioni Generali SpA, whose unwanted attentions loward Midi forced the French merger.

Under the proposal, announced lasi week. Axa would merge its holdings into Midi, receiving 7.2 million new Midi shares as pay-ment to become the "shareholder

The two companies vowed on Tuesday to light a possible bid by Generali, which with its allies is estimated to hold nearly the onethird needed to block key decisions. But they said they were willing to consider a working relationship. Some analysis believed the conciliatory tone toward Generali was meant to "soften the market" for a possible announcement in the weeks ahead of an alliance. They Nonetheless, the European note that takeover speculation had almost doubled the value of Midi's was around 920 francs. A peace pact, they said, would probably cause an immediate 30 percent to 40 percent price plunge. An alliance among the three companies, they noted, could include joint ventures to acquire other insurance groups throughout Europe. The combination of the French companies, to be called by Suchard than by Nestle as a Axa-Midi Assurances, would be the second largest insurance group in France, behind the state-owned Union des Assurances de Paris.

In Trieste, Generali confirmed that it was considering a move to raise new capital at a shareholders meeting next week. Some analysts bebeve that Generali, which is Italy's largest insurer and the fourth largest in Europe, needs a cash infusion to finance any takeover bid. analysts believe that the Italian company and its allies have now accumulated nearly 30 percent.

With 33.3 percent, Generali would have a minority blocking share under French law. That would allow it to stop the proposed merger, 10 be considered at a special shareholders meeting on June 29. Brokers reported that large blocks of shares were snapped up in Paris on Monday and Tuesday and that Generali was the suspected buyer. Midi's stock rose to 1,800 francs on Tuesday from 1,750 francs on Monday, in heavy volume of about 100,000 shares. "We're completely open to all solutions," Bernard Pagezy, chairman of Midi, said during a press conference held Tuesday by the two French companies.

Claude Bébéar, chairman of Axa, called Generali "a very beautiful insurance company of international scale with which we could do much together," but he said such an agreement would have to respect the "total equality" of the French partners.

Midi also reported that 1987 profit rose 23.8 percent to 1,35 billion francs from a revised 1.09 billion in 1986. Full figures for 1987 are set for release on Wednesday.

The announcement by Generali that it may seek a new capital increase at its shareholders meeting on May 9 "should send a clear signal to Midi" that it intends to bid, said William Timmerman, an equities dealer with Puget, a Paris

But others were less convinced, "You don't tell the world you're going to be a bidder before you said Ian Furnival, an analyst with Phillips & Drew in London. "It is by no means clear that Generali has any intention of launching a full bid."

In another development, Pascal Vienot, Midi's chief financial offi-cer, said Midi's two-part Eurobond issue, totaling almost $1 billion, would be postponed while its bankers evaluate the proposed merger. The bonds, convertible into equity, were issued to place Midi shares in friendly hands.

NYSE Asks Logs Of Program Trade

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a move designed to belp analyze market volatility, the New York Stock Exchange began Tuesday to require members to submit daily reports of program trades.

The members must submit a log of program trades made for customers or for their own accounts, including trades in other markets, by the close of the second business day after the trades, the exchange said in a statement. Members are not required to identify custom-

Members are not required to identify customers for whom program trades were executed.
Program trading, in which large investors take advantage of price movements between stocks and stock index futures, has been blamed for much of the market volatility at the time of the October stock market crash.
The submission of daily data will "enable the NYSE to more routinely monitor and analyze program trading activity," the exchange said. Many analysts said they supported the move, which had been announced previously.

"It's a good idea because a lot of movement in the market is attributed to program trading that isn't," said Robert Gordon, president of Twenty First Securities Corp. He said he hoped the rule would dispel some concern over program trading gram trading.

Swiss Group to Build Moscow Shopping Mall

United Press International

ZURICH — A Swiss group announced on Tuesday that it had signed a cootract to build and operate Moscow's first shopping center, complete with boutiques, fashion stores, a supermarket and restaurants. The center will accept only hard currency and thus will be accessible only to diplomats, other foreign residents and tourists, the group said.

The consortium comprises the builder Hopf Holding & Verwaltungs AG, the supermarket operator Hofer & Curti and the consumer products company PCW Gruppe. Construction is to begin in November and be completed by 1990. The project is expected to cost $72.5 million at current exchange rates, the companies said.

Kodak Posts 46% Earnings Rise

dak Co.'s earnings rose 46 percent to $260 million, or 80 cents a share, in the first quarter of 1988, from $178 million, or 53 cents a share, a year earlier, the company said Tuesday. It attributed the increase to the weak dollar, higher volume — sales increased 25 percent to $3.33 billion from $2.65 billion in the 1987 quarter—and earnings from Sterling Days Inc. which and earnings from Sterling Drug Inc., which Kodak acquired in February. Analysts said the results were better than expected.

The rapid growth of tourism has added a new dimension to the development of Dubai, one of the United Arab Emirates, as a leading business and commercial center of the Gulf. With a potential market of more than one billion people, it rivals Hong Kong and Singapore as one of the world's leading re-exporters.

NTERPRISING Dubai — one of seven Gulf sheikhdoms that make up the United Arab Emirates — is poised to become a regional leisure and courist center.

Dubai already likes to see itself as a new Hong Kong or Singapore: a vibrant city of entrepreneurs with competitive worldscale industries, excellent communications, an eager and committed worldorce and a lifestyle unmatched in the Tourism is the latest move in a long-standing strategy to lessen the emirate's dependence on oil revenues. This policy has already seen trade-oriented Dubai safely through the deep Gulf-wide recession of the last three years. In contrast to many of its neighbors, it has emerged relatively unscathed and a range of prestigious projects are proceeding to enhance its international profile.

But this deepening interest in leisure and tourism does not imply a lack of commitment elsewhere. Most sectors of Dubai's broadly based economy performed strongly in 1987. And according to Dubai Chamber of Commerce's director general, Abdulrahman Al Mutaiwee, imports reached $5.128 billion in 1987 compared with $4.6 billion the previous year.

Dubai, which accounts for about 85 percent of the UAE's total re-export trade, is the Middle East's prime entrepor. In 1987, re-exports amounted to $1.4 billion, against $817 million the previous year, underlining Dubai's reputation as a city of merchants.

Last year's returns show that, despite a ban on the import of non-essential items, the emirate's crucial reexport trade with Iran held up surprisingly well. But recent changes to Saudi Arabia's import regulations, which call for more direct shipments to the kingdom, may take some of the gloss off this year's figures.

Dubai's diversified and government-owned industrial base is thriving. Among large local industrial concerns, Dubai Aluminium (Dubal) pur in a particularly impressive performance. While world aluminum prices rose, Dubai posted sales of 155,026 metric tons last year. At the company's Jebel Ali plant, work is in hand to boost output of extrusion billet to 125,000 metric tons a year.

Dubai Drydocks (DD) - the world's largest - repaired 151 ships in the year to February 1988. Though this was one fewer than the previous year, the actual amount of work they did was significantly greater. Consequently, their rumover increased 46 percent. War-damaged rankers are thought to account for around 30-35 percent of DD's Foreign industrial investment is now focused on the giant Jebel Ali Free Zone and 67-berth port - 30 km (18 miles) down the coast. Since opening for business in 1985, around 170 companies have signed leases with the Jebel Ali Free Zone Authority (JAFZA).

Jebel Ali's 2,020 hecrare industrial park offers benefits that were previously unavailable in the Middle East - rax privileges, cheap rent, purpose-built facilities and, critically, 100 percent foreign ownership.

The free zone is proving an outstanding success. JAFZA's young and enthusiastic chairman, Sultan bin Sulayem says: "So far this year applications for new companies are coming in at the rate of around 30 a month."

Although Jebel Ali is a major industrial area, JAFZA spokesmen are quick to point out that the free zone is an ideal storage and distribution point for markets in the Gulf, Middle East and around the Indian Ocean tim.

As the nature of Dubai's economy becomes more service oriented and major infrastructural developments are nearly completed, the emphasis is turning to tourism. Last year this was worth around $100 million to the local economy. Dubai is already a major convention and exhibition venue. Other ingredients needed to entice more overseas visitors are in place, but have yet to be fully exploited.

As backers of the fledgling tourist industry see it: Dubai is already an important rechnical stop for airlines. Five-star horels dor the city and fine sandy beaches combine with guaranteed year-round sunshine. There is also cax-free shopping and for more energetic visitors, desert safaris and unlimited opportunities for all kinds of water sports.

Dubai: the Middle East's prime entrepot.

Furthermore, the local municipality has poured millions of dollars into beautification schemes designed to make Dubai a better place to live and work. As a result, carefully tended flower beds line roadsides and roundabouts, while grass sprouts from heavily watered lawns. Dubai is not aiming at a mass-market appeal. The emirate is known to prefer tourists from other Gulf states and high-spending European visitors.

In line with these aims, Dubai has embarked on an ambitious program to add an unparalleled range of sporting and recreational facilities. This is meant not just to attract winter tourists, but also to improve the quality of life for both locals and Dubai's large expatriate population.

In March, the Gulf's first all-grass 18-hole golf course was officially opened by Pakistan's President Zia al-Huq. Its fururistic bedouin tent-inspired chibhouse cuts an impressive dask on the Dubel Jebel Ali road. But the immediate aim is to ensure that the par 72 course designed by Karl Litten, becomes a permanent stopping-off point on the international circuit. It may even inspire more Japanese businessmen to take a closer look at investing in the nearby Jebel Ali Free Zone.

Later this year a new $12.5 million cricket and field hockey stadium will be completed. In time, Dubai would hope to rival nearby Sharjah and host major cricket rournaments in this 30,000-sear venue.

A cultural complex is also planned for McDermott's old creekside site and a horse-race track is under construction. Offshore power boar races are already a regular feature of Dubai's sporting calendar.

The creation of Emirates, Dubai's own airline, is a crucial part of the overall exercise. Launched in October 1985. Emirates now flies to 11 destinations in 10 countries - including a daily non-stop Dubai-London service.

To launch its flagship London route in mid-1987, Emirates took delivery of two new Airbus Industrie A310-300's. In the meantime, the carrier has ordered an A300 600R — the aircraft's extended range version — and has an option on a second. Flights to the Far East will be added soon, airline officials say.

Ar the same time, Dubai's duty free complex offers travelers some of the world's cheapest prices. The high turnover and tight profit margins are coupled with a commitment to sell duty free as part of the airport's service to passengers. Turnover at the shopping hall reached $52.5 million in 1987 — a hefty increase over 1986's $31.5 million, reflecting its popularity with shoppers.

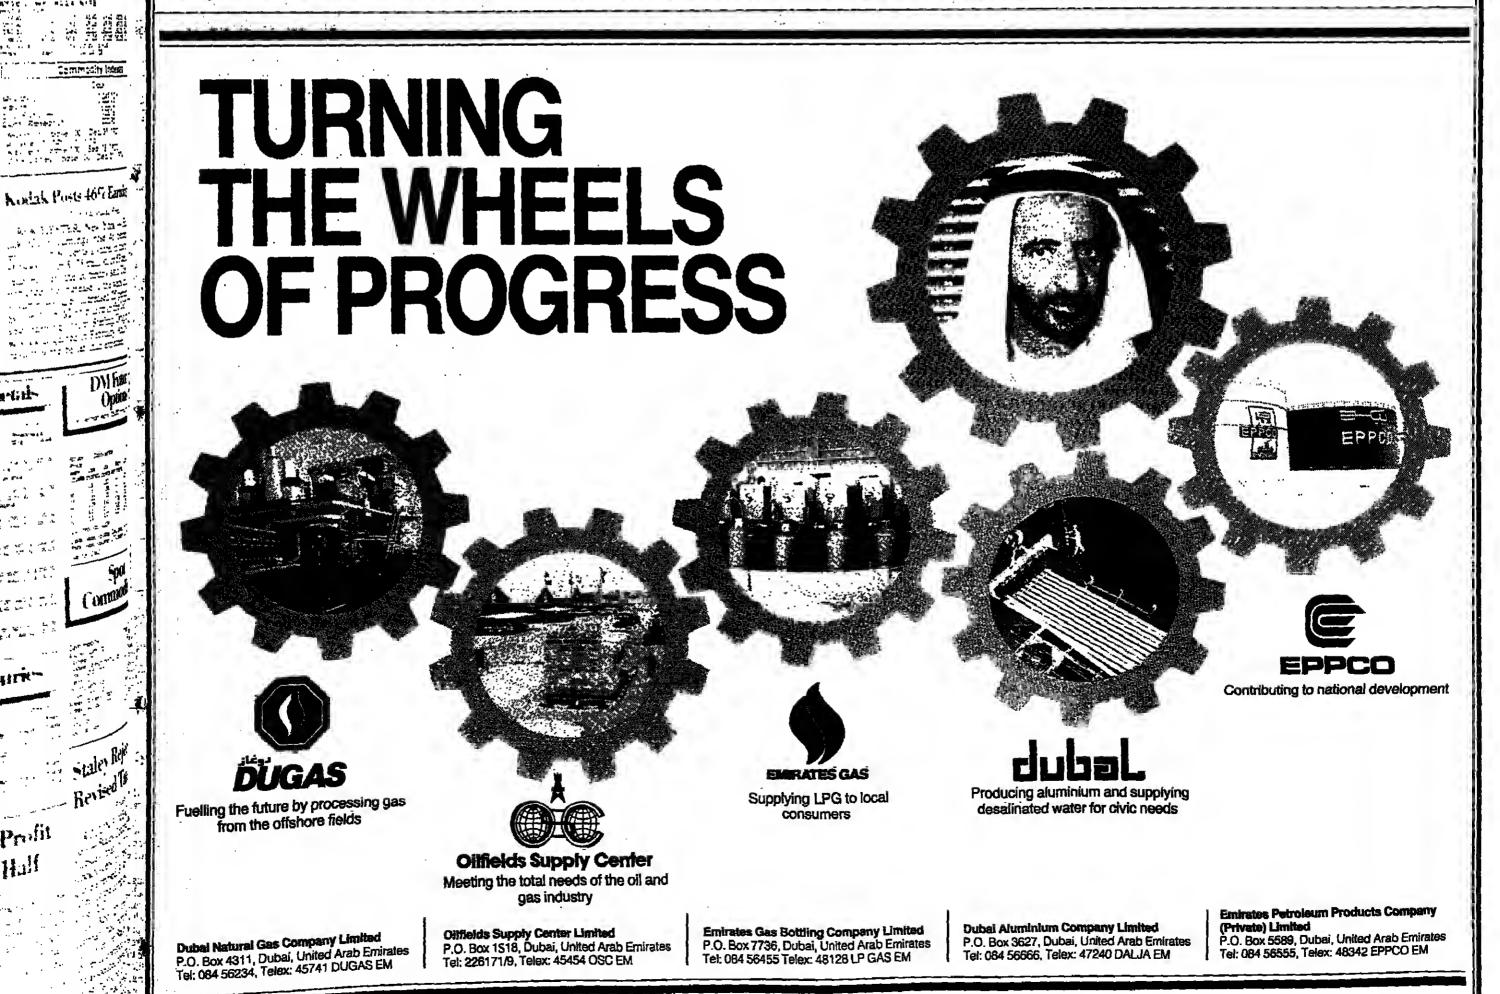

Furthermore, an extra 540,000 passengers used Dubai International Airport as passenger traffic climbed nearly 14 percent to reach 4.3 million last year. Air freight hit 116,841 metric tons - a rise of 17.6 percent.

Despite the arrival of Emirates, Dubai has maintained its "open-skies" aviation policy. Around 50 different airlines - 11 of which are freight only - use the airport and more are on the way.

As the Gull's main freight hub, Dubai has pioneered and developed combined sea/air cargo services — a halfway house solution for cost-conscious shippers.

Close coordination between the airport and the emirate's Port Rashid has been essential in getting the concept off the ground. Five years ago sea/air freighting was almost unknown in the Middle East. Today Dubai is handling 16.5 million kilos a year. And based on first quarter figures, it looks ser to record 22 million kilos in 1988.

Modern Infrastructure, Tolerant Atmosphere Facilitate Banking Consolidation

HE Dubai banking community has adapted well to the challenges posed by a changed tempo of economic activity and growing competitive pressures in the region. Operating costs have been pruned, new technology has been brought on-line and additional customer services introduced.

A significant portion of the UAE's total financial sector, some 50 local and foreign banks, have branches, offices and headquarters in Dubai. Lately it has not been easy for foreign institutions, whose principal letter of credit business has been impacted by fluctuating trade volumes and volarile exchange rates. Yet the predicted flight of foreign banks has not materialized. The fact that so few have departed reflects the emirate's continued importance as a transit point between east and west as well as a center for regional business transac-

The more confident mood is reflected by results from the Union Bank of the Middle East (UBME) which show profits up by 38.9 percent, from Dh 22.6 million ($6.153 million) to Dh 31.4 million in 1987. Over the same period, assets increased 7.8 percent, from Dh 70.3 million to Dh 83.7 million. The figures emphasize the success of UBME's 1985 reorganization when the bank acquired Emirates National Bank and Dubai Bank.

British Bank of the Middle East (BBME), the first bank to open in Dubai in 1946, is among the leaders in the provision of computer-based counter services and ATMs. Its Hexagon computer system allows business clients to make transactions without leaving their desks, by using a personal computer.

BBME can also call on the resources of its parent, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, which is one of the world's top 20 banks. Links to the Hongkong group's dealing rooms in the Far East, London and New York allow BBME in Dubai to offer its customers a full range of capital market products.

In a move that is indicative of long-term confi-dence, BBME is presently undertaking a substantial development of its treasury services in Dubai. Bank executives say that the augmented service, covering the whole region and Indian subcontinent, will be the most comprehensive and competitive in the Middle East. Dubai Emerges as Regional Leader in Sea/Air Cargo Boom well-targeted in-L Nestment, slick marketing and its strategic location in the southern Gulf, has made Dubai's Port Rashid the Gulf's undisputed freight and distribution gateway. In sharp contrast to other ports in the region, 1987 was a record year for Port Rashid. It handled cargos totaling 8.66 million metric tons, compared to only 6.6 million the previous year.

Over 70 percent of Port Rashid's trade is containerized. Last year throughput reached 523,145 reu (twenty foot equivalent units) — a 36 percent increase on 1986.

The increase, which places Rashid among the world's top 25 container hubs, was largely attributable to a move by the Ttident Service — U.S. carrier customs formalities.

combination of Sea-Land, Italy's Merzario and French operator NCHP — from nearby Jebel Ali to Port Rashid in April 1987. Figures for the first quarter of this year have continued to climb by a healthy 37.4 percent.

More modest improvements are expected in overall box traffic. "We are at least looking to better 1987's figures and growth should be around 5 percent this year," claims a senior port official.

Dubai's strategic location between east and west has led Port Rashid to focus on combined sea/air shipments that add the cheapness of sea transport to the speed of airfreight. Increasing numbers of shippers now choose Dubai for its quick handling, minimal documentation and easy

Around 90 percent of Dubai's sea/air traffic is currently destined for Europe although, freight experts point out, the U.S. and Africa are becoming in-creasingly important. The cargo generally comprises high-value electronic goods and components from Hong Kong, Taiwan and South Korea. But Indian textile exports moving of the total traffic. As regional market leader, Dubai's total sea/air cargo nearly doubled to 16.5 million kilos in 1987. The trend looks likely to continue this year - at 4.6 million kilos, sea/air was up 34 percent in the first quarter.

Last year's massive traffic upsurge has produced immediate results. In January, Dubai's largest sea/air specialist Gulf Express Freight — part of the worldwide Gulf Agency Company — expanded its priority freight station within Port Rashid. This is used to strip containers and palletize cargo for dispatch to the airport nearby.

The majority of Dubai's 22 or so sea/air forwarders the port. But GEF's move up in the port itself," a Port Authority official says. The close links between port and airport mean sea/air freight can be discharged, repalletized and loaded on board an aircraft within five hours - a figure few other sea/air gateways can match.

Alternative interchange points - Sharjah and Fuiairah — are both pushing for a larger slice of the UAE's growing sea/air traffic market. But while Port Rashid has won all the boxhandling bouquets, 67-berth Jebel Ali — just 30 km (18 miles) down the coast - has looked elsewhere for business. Jebel Ali, the world's largest manmade harbor, lost a large chunk of its box trade when the three-member Trident Service liner consortium moved to Port Rashid last year.

This may well prove to be a blessing in disguise. For it has left Jebel Ali free to tealize its potential as a major free zone and industrial port. Since the zone was launched in 1985, the attractions of 100 percent foreign ownership, land were signed up with Jebel in addition to the $2 billion rents of just $1.45 per repackage cargo away from square meter and a range of rax privileges have brought to Port Rashid has set a a rush of inquiries from new trend. "We hope to around the world. As of get more forwarders to set mid-April, 170 companies

Port Rashid reached record throughput last year.

(JAFZA). "Outside investment in Jebel Ali has already reached about $500 million," boasts chairman Sultan bin Sulayem. This is emment made to set up the basic infrastructure.

Though 76 new leases were signed in 1986, lettings slowed a little last year. Says JAFZA's marketing director Ed Butler: Quite simply, garment manufacturers came in bot and heavy and we had to act for fear of U.S. quoras being levied on Dubai. Since we placed restrictions on new garment manufacturers, there has been a drop in inquiries."

Prospects for 1988, though, look brighter. A number of major projects are already in the pipeline. According to Mr. Sulayem: We hope to reach a target of 300 companies by end-1988. After three years of promotion and development, companies can see that Jebel Ali is a place to come for distribution and investment."

JAFZA has tirelessly scoured the world for new business. "This month we are off to the Hannover Fair and expect in bring in some German companies. And after a recent trip to the U.S., sewing machine manufacturer Singer is coming in and will use Jebel Ali as its Middle East distribution base," Mr. Sulayem adds.

Singer's move is typical of many firms which start small, test JAFZA's incentives, and then move on to set up a manufacturing base in the free zone. "There is no minimum investment," Mr. Sulayem claims:

The 45 square km (17 square miles) free zone houses a variety of industrial and petrochemical complexes. Cheap energy has attracted some, good land availability others. Major international firms - BP, Shell, Caltex and U.S. offshore manufacturer McDermorr — plus some of the best local companies - Dubai Aluminium (Dubal) and Dubai National Gas Company (Dugas) — have all opted for Jebel Ali. A number of the top names in consumer products also use Jebel Ali as their regional storage and distribution base. They include 3M, Black & Decker, Safeway and Xerox.

Some of Jebel Ali's biggest current projects involve local interests - either on their own or in joint ventures. A local/Indian joint venture, Emirates Narmada Industries, is proposing to build a $71 million phosphoric acid manufacturing plant; Abu Dhabi's Star Energy Resources is working on a petroleum products storage and distribution center and the local Al Ghurair Group completed a 120,000 metric ton capacity grain cicvator late last year.

JAFZA also wants service industries. Banking and insurance are at the top of the Authority's list of potential service-sector residents. But it will be at least two years before this happens. Says Mr. Sulayem: "First we need a new set of rules and regulations."

A new 52-suite leased office building for small firms opened a year ago. All available space was quickly snapped up and JAFZA plans to add further such buildings later this year.

Ten speculative prebuilt factory units were completed in mid-1987, and, according to Mr. Butler, "sold like hot cakes." A contract to construct 30 more - half of which are urcady sold --- has just been signed, and another 70 are being considered.

But the free zone's runaway success has led other emirates - Fujairah, Umm al-Quwain and now Sbarjah — to follow Jebel Ali's lead. A move the frustrated garment industry bas been quick to seize on.

Gold watches, pens and lighters were not included in the figure, which amounted to 20 percent of Duty Free revenue.

Most duty-free outlets depend on drinks and tobacco for trade. But in Dubai, although drinks and tobacco sales are growing, they are decreasing as a proportion of total turnover. În 1987 cigarettes, cigars, and tobacco accounted for only 12 percent of sales, and drinks a further 12 per-

Yet it was only as recently as 1983 that Dubai's director of civil aviation, Mohi-Din Binhendi, admired the style of the duty-free shops at Shannon airport and invited a ten-person team from Acr Rianta, the Irish Civil Aviation Authority, to advise on setting up the Dubai Complex.

Three of the original team from Ireland remain in top management positions, leading a well-trained multinational staff. al Airport is expanding so fast that it is in danger of outstripping facilities built only two years ago. In 1987, the airport handled 4.3 million passengers - or nearly 12,000 passengers a day — against 3.8 million the previous year. Around 40 percent of these travelers were in transit, making Dubai the world's second largest interchange erator of the Year.'

point after Tokyo's Narita. The limits to the airport's annual capacity are currently set at 5.2 million passengers, but already it seems that the tecent expansion will prove insufficient to meet even mediumterm demand. The first phase of this $48 million expansion program was completed in 1986, and included a new $35 million arrivals hall. The existing terminal, built in 1971, was also completely refurbished and is now used solely for departures. Though the work was originally de-

The airport authorities see the shopping complex as a means of attracting passengers to transit through the emirate. Its success may also persuade some airlines to stay put in Dubai, especially after the introduction of new long-haul Boeing 747-400 aircraft that will allow carriers on east-west routes to overfly the Middle East. While this situation concerns all Gulf airports, Dubai is better placed than many of its neighbors.

Dubai is currently host to 50 scheduled carriers -

Combined sea/air shipments accounted for slightly less than 20 percent of this total and Dubai shows every sign of maintaining its position as the world's fastest growing sea/ait transit point. With a 35 percent increase in the first quarter, the airport is banking on another recordbreaking set of figures for

The surge in freight traffic has resulted in Dubai working at close to maximum capacity. Belly-hold capacity on many westbound flights out of Dubai are also full and local forwarders are now having to divert overflow traffic to nearby Sharjah and Abu Dhabi airports.

Aluminum Exports Reach Million Mark

AST fall, when Nor Asia's Al Mansoorah sailed from Jebel Ali for the Far East, the Dubai Aluminium Company (DUBAL) exported its one millionth metric ton of aluminum.

Improved metal prices, continued cost control and sheer productivity all helped DUBAL achieve its best year since production began in 1979.

Total finished metal production was 154,832 metric tons — the highest output ever. Premium products made up 89 percent of the total, another record. "We are now concentrating almost exclusively on premium products," says a company spokesman. The majority of these were extrusion biller, which represented 55 percent of total production. Other premium products included 13,662 metric tons of high purity ingot, 31,514 metric tons of foundry alloy, 5,561 metric tons of EC grade ingot and 1,404 metric tons of 99.8/99.85 percent aluminum ingot. A further 16,628 metric tons of commercial grade remelt ingor were produced, but will be phased our during the course of the year as the plant moves toward 100 percent premium output. Modifications to the casthouse are being made to improve product quality and maximize biller capacity, which should reach 125,000 metric tons by the end of the year. Last year's continuous program of technological updating has also helped make DUBAL more competitive.

As a spokesman commented: "The aim of increasing hot metal production through improved efficiency began to bear fruit, with hot metal output at a record of 155,876 metric tons - more than 20,000 merric tons above the company's rated production capacity of 135,000 metric tons."

Further progress was also recorded in other sectors last year. Due to increased demand, DUBAL's own power station produced nine billion metric tons of desalinated water - a by-product of the smelting operation the highest figure since its desalinación plant became functional. The average supply to Dubai was 24.14 million gallons (109.74 million liters) per day - another record, and an increase of 2.6 mgpd over the previous DUBAL's scrong commitment to staff training resolted io 11 Gulf nationals eiving internationally recognized qualifications. The proportion of naoonal employees also rose. By the end of 1987 they numbered 131 among DUBAL's total workforce of 1,305, compared to 94 of 1,300 at the end of the previous year.

Meanwhile, en route to its millionth metric ton, DUBAL exported aluminum to 22 countries including, for the first time, Finland, Indonesia and Sri Lanka. Japan, which purchased 70,802 metric tons, was the major consumer, taking 46 percent of total output. Second came the U.S. with 29,283 metric tons (19 percent), followed by Taiwan (11,318 metric tons -7 percent), Korea (10,833 metric tons - 7 percent) and the UAE (9,062 metric tons - 6 percent).

much-needed, scheme to build a new cargo terminal and forwarders' village. Budgetary constraints and design changes have so far delayed the project's goahead. But scaled-down ptoposals for the new complex were presented to the local authorities in February. These are thought to conform to a reduced budget of around $30 million.

The original proposals set the new cargo terminal's annual capacity at 376,000 metric tons. But local aviation experts expressed concern about its size. Consequently, any new facility is likely to be "transitional" in nature.

Despite the volumes now being handled, Dubai's air freight forwarding community is housed in a number of old buildings and there is no proper cargo terminal. But as the figures prove, and one airline's cargo chief points out, "the present system acrually

Samsung Striving to Close South Korea's High-Tech Gap

SEOUL - South Korea's leading maker of semiconductors, Samsung Semiconductor & Telecommunications Co., is striving to join the ranks of major chip makers in Japan and the United States.

The company is producing about seven million 256-kilobit dynamic random access memory, or DRAM, microchips a month, equal to the average of Japan's biggest makers, analysts say.

It also is making a run at closing the country's technological gap with Japan and the United States. "We expect to grow from num-ber 20 in the world to number 9 by the turn of the century" in terms of semiconductor capacity, S.R. Yoo, senior manager for planning, said in a recent interview.

Success would feed electronics, South Korea's dominant industry, and nourish automotive and other growing businesses in an increasingly high-tech economy, analysis point out.

But the task will not be easy. Samsung must challenge the likes of NEC Corp., Toshiba Corp. and Hitachi Ltd. of Japan, and Motorola Inc. and National Semiconductor of the United States, companies with big advantages in money, engineering manpower and technol-

U.S. Leasing Company to Buy at Least 100 New Aircraft

BEVERLY HILLS. California - International Lease Finance Corp., an aircraft leasing company, says it is close to concluding an agreement for more than $4 billion to buy 100 airliners, either all from Boeing Co. or from both McDonnell Douglas Corp. and Airbus Industrie.

The company may announce its decision as soon as next week, Louis L. Gonda, the executive vice president, said Monday. With options to buy additional airliners, the order could total

It is unlikely that the company will divide the order among the three manufacturers, Mr. Gonda said, because aircraft builders offer greater discounts for larger orders.

If the leasing company chooses Boeing, the package will probably include the most advanced models of the 737, 757 and 767 twin jets and of the four-engine 747, Mr. Gunda said.

The company, which reported earning $51.2 million last year on sales of $180 million, is also considering McDonnell Douglas's MD-11, MD-80 and MD-90 series together with Airbus's A-310, A-320, A-330 and A-340.

The planes are for delivery between 1991 and 1995. International Lease Finance, founded by Mr. Gonda and two other Hungarian immigrants in 1973, has 65 jets leased to 30 airlines, planes. Last year, Airbus sold the company six A-320 and A-330 jets for delivery in 1990 and 1993, a spokesman for the British, French, West German and Spanish consortium said.

The company has leased out more than 200

ROLLING MEADOWS, IIIinois - Gould Inc. said Tuesday that its board had agreed to sell its dustrial automation division for 290 million to AEG AG of West Germany. Gould will use some of the proceeds to buy back up to 20 percent of its common stock.

AEG is a subsidiary of Daimler-Benz AG. The Gould division makes computers and electronic $13 on the news in morning trading equipment for factory automation.

AEG's move into the U.S. automation market comes after Siemens, another big West German electrical group, announced March 31 that it was forming a joint venture in factory automation systems with Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Siemens is the market leader in the field outside the United States.

Gould had 45.2 million shares of common stock outstanding at March 31. The stock repurchase. which requires agreement from lenders, will be made over the next 12 months in the open market. through negotiated transactions or U.S. employment figures for April. The currency remained within narrow ranges. Dealers said the dollar was unlikely to rise enough to test 1.68 Deutsche marks, for example, but would instead trade in its current bands until Friday.

There is no real reason to sell the dollar, but no one wants to buy it either," one dealer said. The dollar rose in New York to 1.6798 DM, from 1.6780 at Monday's close; to 125.15 yea, from 124.80; to 5.7105 French francs. from 5.6985; and to 1.3985 Swiss Francs, from 1.3970.

It also gained against the British pound, which closed at $1.8690. down from $1.8735.

But dollar trading was slow, as market participants shifted their attention to high-yielding curren-cies, such as the Australian and Canadian dollars.

The Australian dollar rose to a three-year high of 76.66 U.S. cents from a closing 76.10 cents on Monday. Dealers attributed the move in the Australian dollar largely to expectations that figures to be released Wednesday would show that inflation is casing.

At Veneral 26 Australia's first-quarter Consomer Price Index is expected to show a rise of around 1.5 percent, compared with a rise of 1.7 percent in the fourth quarter of 1987.

Dealers in Sydney said they thought the Australian Reserve Bank had intervened to smooth the rise in the currency.

London Dollar Rates

U.S. dollar at 1,2368 Canadian dollars, against 1.2330 on Monday.
The dollar closed in London at 1.6768 Deutsche marks, up from Friday's close of 1.6745, and at 124.80 yen, down from 124.95.

The British pound was lower against the dollar, ending at $1.8715, after $1.8793 Friday. London markets were closed vionday for a holiday.

Dealers said falling oil prices and the prospect of higher U.S. interest rates had helped cool inflationary fears, but the underlying sentiment on the dollar was still bearish. They were divided over the likely impact of the U.S. employment fig-ures. The market consensus is for a gain in nonfarm payroll employment of 220,000 to 300,000 jobs. Such a figure could indicate a buoyant economy and rekindle worries over inflation.

But some traders said the employment data would have little impact on currency markets. The re-lease on May 17 of U.S. trade figures for March will provide more meaningful pointers to the economy, they said.

In earlier European trading, the dollar was fixed in Frankfurt at 1.6773 DM, down from 1.6812, and in Paris at 5.7005 French francs, down from 5.7125.

It closed in Zurich at 1.3957 Swiss francs, down from 1.4000.

Bundesbank Is Expected To Maintain Money Rates

FRANKFURT -- The Bundesbank's policy-making council will discuss the further development of the European Monetary System at its regular meeting on Thursday, but is likely to leave domestic interest rates untouched, economists say.

Some money market dealers have been expecting the Bundesbank to allow West German interest rates to rise in line with the U.S. trend, especially because the money supply here is surging.

The speculation was fueled by a newspaper interview last week with the Bundesbank's vice president, Helmut Schlesinger. He noted that there was currently a slight rise in dollar interest rates "which usually does not leave West Germany completely unaffected." The Bundesbank's steady monetary course was underlined on Tuesday when it offered to supply liquidity to the money market at B fixed 3.25 percent, unchanged since late last November. After Thursday's meeting, the central bank president Karl Otto Pohl and other officials will hold a press conference on the EMS issues. Economists said that by annouocing the subject of the press conference, the central hank intended to dampen any speculation of pendent producers to what was viewed as a historic engagement to act in tandem in regulating output to raise prices. The delegates argued that even though the non-OPEC offer was too small, it could have been improved upon later.

For Saudi Arabia, however, the stakes were equally high, Saudi officials said. Among other things, they said, it was important to dis pense with the ootion that OPEC was obliged to cut production every time prices fell.

"OPEC alone cannot halance supply and demand," Hisham Nazer, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, The Canadian currency extend-said Monday. "This is a world re-to stop exceeding production quo-tas, as the United Arah Emirates, one of the few countries in OPEC to stick by such agreements. "A new horizon stands before OPEC, to end this endless vicious cycle that we have known, which need for a new cut in production, etc.," Mr. Nazer said. Saudi Arabia also dislikes acting

He said OPEC members also had larger cuts than anyone else when action is needed to raise prices.

Mr. Nazer said that was why Saudi Arabia opposed the idea of proportional cuts in OPEC produc-tion, which means the largest producers, among them the Saudis, take large cuts while smaller producers take negligible cuts.

The OPEC meeting failed because Sandi Arabia insisted that the cartel offer only to match the non-OPEC producers' cutback and that the amount be divided equally among the 12 OPEC producers who agreed to participate. Iraq has not observed production cuts because of its war with Iran.

Non-OPEC members insisted much bigger cut, at least 700,000 barrels a day. Eight OPEC members did suggest a cut of 300,000 barrels a day but insisted that the majority of the cutback be made by Saudi Arabia and other larger OPEC producers. Mercedes's U.S. Sales Rise

Economists Vote For French Franc

PARIS - When Sunday's final round of the race for the French presidency is over, the franc might just avoid its recent post-election fate of a swift devaluation, econo-

The French currency would probably hold firm in the immediate aftermath of the vote, they said, and a much anticipated cut in its value might be delayed until the end of the year.

"In political circles, right-wing or left-wing, nobody is considering the possibility" of a devaluation, said Jacques Le Cacheux, economist with the partly state-run OFCE economic research institute. Ecocomists said the franc's future would depend on the political repercussions of what is widely expected to be a convincing victory by the Socialist incumbent, Francois Mitterrand, over his conservative prime mioister, Jacques Chirac, in the two-person race. Since January 1987, when the European Monetary System's exchange rate mechanism was last realigned. French inflation has pushed the franc up 2 percent to 3 percent against the Deutsche mark in trade-weighted terms. That is, French purchasers can buy a greater amount of West German goods for the same price. A decline in the franc on the currency markets would help redress that shift, and all major French economie research bodies now forecast a similar fall in the franc during 1988.

But, if the franc were to fall further against the mark, it would force a major readjustment of the fixed trading ranges allowed under "France has lived for 20 years now ties to weaken the franc and make French exports more competitive. From the authorities' standpoint, though, a weaker franc would increase inflation by making imports more expensive.

We are against a devaluation. Pierre Beregovoy, the finance min-ister in France's last Socialist administration, said on Tuesday.

Latest consumer price figures showed French inflation at 2.5 per-ent in March, compared with 1 percent in West Germany for the same month. But the main question about the franc remains the political fallout from Sunday's vote.

"We cannot foresee what kind of governmental situación will emerge when Mitterrand is re-elected,

Mr. Horne said. Politically, the French right is in disarray, after the surge of support in the first round for Jean-Marie Le Pen, the ultra-conservative candidate. As a result, it seems unlikely to challenge a Mitterrand government by forcing a quick parliamentary election. Dissolution of the existing parliament, dominated by Mr. Chirac's party and its centrist allies, is by no means automatic if Mr. Mitterrand wins. He has said he would first name a oew prime minister and only dissolve parliament if that government was defeated. If an incoming Socialist government was broadly considered to be reformist in its economic policy. such as the Socialist one just before the parliameotary elections of March 1986, the franc would probably remain stable, economists said. After that last election, the franc was devalued.

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.: Patron Saint of the Conservatives

By John B. Judis. 528 pages. $22.95. Simon & Schuster, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N. Y. 10020.

Reviewed by J. Anthony Lukas

THE summer of 1975 was a season of discontent for the American Right. Richard Nixon was in exile at San Clemente, Spiro Agnew licked his wounds in Maryland, and a host of their subalterns faced criminal charges while public revulsion at Watergate and back-lash at President Ford's pardon of Nixon fore-told a Republican debacle the following year.

But early that summer, the most prominent advocate of American conservatism put these travails behind him, setting sail across the Atlantic aboard his sumptuous 60-foot schoo-ner, Cyrano, Once aboard, William F. Buckley Jr., his son and other crewmembers hearkened to Bach and Scarlatti, dined on the best of fish and fowl, and slaked their thirst from a splendid wine rack, disporting themselves by filling the empty bottles with anti-communist mes-sages which they cast overboard in hopes they would wash up on some appreciative shore. Buckley's contribution was "Oga Fidel: Ven-iam Videbo Vincam." ("Listen, Fidel, I willcome, I will see, I will conquer").

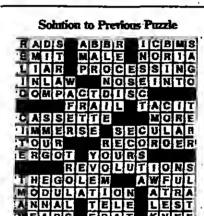

That voyage was an appropriate metaphor for the figure Bill Buckley has increasingly cut in his maturity: sybarinc, witty, erudite, languid and grandiloquent, largely aloof from the ideological jihads of the New Right, standing off the rocky coast of American conservatism and lobbing bottles filled with arch but caustic commentary into the foamy brine.

In this critical biography, John Judis has documented Buckley's evolution from aggrieved outsider to self-satisfied insider, from enfant terrible of the extreme Right to tame confident of presidents, from critic of Ameri-ca's cultural values to media celebrity, best-selling novelist and darling of establishment That Judis — a senior editor of the socialist journal In These Times — should have produced this carefully modulated work is a tribute to him (as it is to Buckley who granted this milkely biographer not only ample interview time but full access to his papers at Yale).

Judis is no ideologue (in addition to his own nagazine, he writes for the politically hybrid New Republic) and he is scrupulously fair.

Judis gives his prickly man of the Right ample credit where credit is due, so that his critical judgments are telling.

That Bill Buckley is an American original well worth the conscientious and fair-minded attention he gets here, there can be little dispute. That his career illuminates the nature of American conservatism, and therefore of American politics over the past half century, however, is a notion yet to be demonstrated.

J. Anthony Lukas won a Pulitzer Prize in 1986 for "Common Ground: A Turbulent De-cade in the Lives of Three American Families." He wrote this for The Washington Post.

The small extra overlooked opportunity is more likely to come to light on an international occasion, where players and journalists pick the post-mortem bones clean.

An example is the dia-gramed deal from a recent match between Wales and Scotland. South eventually pushed to four spades, know-ing that most of the high card ble, since East is marked with strength, presumably includ-honor strength and heart took the ace and returned the queen. South won with the king, drew trumps and eventunesse of the diamond ten. He therefore failed and there were plenty of analysts willing to tell him his error: he should.

He would then have had enough entries to ruff chibs twice and establish the queen for a diamond discard. The ex-

NEW YORK - Thirty days. As jail sentences go, not much But in baseball, it's more than four of the season's 26 weeks. Thirty days. That is Pete Rose's sentence, handed down

Monday by A. Bartlett Gia-matti, the National League president, after the Cincinnati mannight. Their confrontation over Pallone's delayed call at first base, which led to New York's winning run, incited Riverfront Stadium fans to throw garbage, lighters, radios and coins, among other objects, on the field.

Thirty days is the longest suspension for a manager since Leo Durocher, then Brooklyn's dugout genius, was exiled for one year by Commissioner Happy Chandler in 1947 for "These people in the bleachers are sick," Rose wrote in his book, "Charlie Hustle," referring to his first appearance at Dodger Stadium in 1974. "And there certifies a Eastle of the state of the stat

Thirty days is Giamatti's way of putting baseball on alert that crowds must be controlled, not incited. It's about time.

Rose planned to appeal the suspension Tuesday (he would be allowed to manage while the appeal is under consideration), but if his sentence provokes other managers and other clubs to let anyone shout words like that control of their crowds, Giamatti's ruling will be cheered by all fans tired of watching and listening to too many vulgar rowdies at too many ballparks.

"The National League will not tolerate the degeneration of baseball games into dangerous displays of public disorder," Giamatti said. "Nor will it countenance any potentially injurious harassment of any kind of the umpires."

Last Thursday, Giamatti was telling friends that crowd control was baseball's biggest prob-lem. Not the balk rule, not the fively ball, oot scuffed balls, not corked bats, but something truly important to the essence of the game - the preservation of a proper atmosphere for family entertainment.

Two nights later, Rose shoved Pallone twice (violently, according to witnesses) during their argument. Intimidated by a major league umpire had been driven out of the game by an aroused crowd.

"Such disgraceful episodes are not business as usual," Giamath said. "Nor can they be allowed to become so,"

It's too bad Rose happened to be the test case. He has more hits (4,256) than anyone else in major league history. He played in ager twice shoved umpire Frank

Pd be damned if Pd think twice about maintaining if I were there with my wife and kids. OK. a ticket gives a fan a right to yell and scream, but you can go too far. We are human beings out there." So are umpires. There's a subplot to the suspension. Giamatti reprimanded Marty Brennaman and Joe Nuxhall, the Reds' radio announcers. "inflammatory and comfor pletely irresponsible remarks" about Pallone that contributed to the incitement of the fans, some of whom were listening to the game on portable radios. "I don't back off what I said," Brennaman said Sunday. 1 think he is incompetent, and I react on the air the way I do at home. I don't know how many people were listening to me at the park. My first obligation is to the people listening at home."

Come off it. What worries me is exploitation.

LONDON - Can anyone tell me who or what is a foreigner? Where, for that matter, is Europe? Europe's soccer union, UEFA, met in Scotland on Tuesday to discuss a European Community directive to the effect that rules limiting chibs to two or three foreign players per team are restrictive. How on earth does UEFA respond? The rules are not UEFA's, the rules are agreements between clubs within separate national leagues.

UEFA's Europe is lar wider than the EC. It embraces 34 countries, East and West, within which eligibility is toterpreted nearly 34 different ways.

Clubs hire whom they want in tions and customer appeal. Haphazard? Life often is.

The British, Dutch, French and Portuguese, for example, count as their own players from regions with which they had ethnic or colonial links. EC politicians care less about that than their own interests. So what if a bomegrown Italian player fears that Italian clubs would rather pay inflated prices for imported mercenaries. Let him strike, if he must, when three instead of two foreigners are allowed in this year?

out to Como. Milan's president, if demands unlimited movement. not its coach, thinks Borghi should now get his chance.

But what of the Italian boy's rights? Aren't his opportunities to gain work experience restricted by unlimited imports?

Spain currently allows only two foreigners per team, although Bar-celona and Real Madrid buy more and dump the surplus. That is a line with their federations, tradi- restrictive practice, a cynical one: It pays for the likes of Allan Simonsen, Bernd Schuster, Mark Hughes and Jorge Valdano, and wastes their prime.

Basques will never do that. Try telling a Basque club it must recruit from the rest of Spain, never mind Europe. Followers of Athletic Bilbão or Real Sociedad de San Sebastian are supporting separatism without supporting the bombers. Their players are exclusively Basque (albeit they're trained by an Englishman and a Welshman).

The EC demands have brought EC pressure opens the door, but stupid ramifications. UEFA's exectivan Nielsen, Jan Heintze, Frank not, Scifo will be idle. Napoli is expected to add a third unive on Tuesday proposed a limit Arnesen and Soren Lerby - plus At 18, most youths can vote, can

SINCE 1735 THERE HAS NEVER BEEN A QUARTZ BLANCPAIN WATCH. AND THERE NEVER WILL BE.

Bruins Beat Devils, 5-3, in Wales Conference Opener The Bruins built up a 3-goal lead — the third on this shot by Craig Janney over sprawling goalie Bob Sauve during a second-period power play - but had to scramble before beating New Jersey in the opener of the Wales Conference finals Monday in Boston. The Devils tied the game early in the third period on Tom Kurvers's second goal of the night before Ray Bourque and Ken Linseman converted arrant rebounds to run Boston's home record to 6-0 in the current National Hockey League playoffs.

Political Second Heat?

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — George Bush, Michael Dukakis and the Baltimore Orioles are all in the same pickle. The season for all three having ended before it really began, what do they do now to keep their publics awake?

By losing 21 consecutive games from opening day to Thursday last, the Orioles confront the problem of how to keep people coming to the ballpark all summer to cheer a Bush to keep us awake from the team that's been dead since April.

If baseball were boxing, the referee would stop the Orioles' season right now. Instead, they must keep performing for the next five months, all the way to October, because long ago some old bore, probably stupefied with drink, said that in baseball it's never over until the last yawn is yawned.

Dukakis and Bush are a month worse off than the Orioles. They have to keep the public awake until

So what can be done? The cavalry is not going to arrive in the nick of time, bringing Dr. Frankenstein and his famous lightning rods to hring Bush and Dukakis to life. Aware of this, people who write and talk politics professionally are trying to use the power of positive thinking on us.

They are starting to ask what's wrong with having a presidential campaign between two men who put you to sleep? The presidency, after all, is not show business; it involves a lot of pretty dull work: maybe it's time we all grew up and learned to prefer some pretty dull guys for the job, et cetera and blah hlah hlah.

This is what old-time politicians called "baioney," not "bologna," because they knew that fun was a vital element of politics and that anybody who called it "bologna" instead of "baloney" hadn't an ounce of fun in his soul.

Positive thinking is not going to work. Dukakis and Bush are dull, dull, dull, and people forget things that are dull, no matter how admirahle. Wedding anniversaries, for example, are admirable but dull, That's why they are always being

A Bush-Dukakis election campaign might be even more forgettahle than a wedding anniversary. Some voters would remember, of course. There are always some who occasions, but do we really want a president who appeals to the kind of people who don't forget their wedding anniversaries? I propose a solution so sensible that it will be utterly ignored: Since the party conventions are still months away, there is ample time for a second heat to be run, and it should be. It would be bad enough having nothing political but Dukakis and conventions to Election Day, Having nothing else between now and the conventions is more than the spirit can bear. But suppose Bush and Dukakis, having won the first heat, could relax until the conventions, when they would have to compete for the nominations with winners of a sec-Foolish, you say? A pipe dream?

The parties will never go for it? True, alas, woefully true. But wouldn't it be wonderful just the

Now that we are afflicted with a Dukakis-Bush campaign, don't you wish you had another chance to choose? Was Senator Dole really that bad? At least be would have been more fun than Bush with that 'education president" line, wouldn't he?

And, really now, why not Mario Cuomo? Dukakis wouldn't even have entered at the start if Cuomo hadn't been so coy. Which campaign would you rather see: Bush against Dukakis, or Dole vs. Cuomo?

Show me somebody who prefers the Bush-Dukakis election and I'll show you somebody who'd vote the best-picture Oscar 10 "The Last Emperor" because he was too embarrassed to admit having such a wonderful time watching "Moonstruck."

The second heat, of course, might produce any number of pos-sibilities. How about General Haig against Bruce Babbitt? Jesse Jackson against Jesse Helms? Barry Goldwater against Edmund Muskie? You're waking up already, aren't you?

Winners of the second heat would fight it out against Dukakis and Bush in the conventions. And why not? Facing terminal boredom, the country is entitled to have a second opinion.

Hossein and a Cast of Hundreds

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss
International Herald Tribune PARIS — Robert Hossein, long a prominent star in the European cinema, swerved from acting to directing a few years ago and has since emerged as the creator of gigantic stage pageants derived from literary classics, his-tory and the Bible.

Mounted in auditoriums capable of holding large audiences, like the Palais des Sports and the Palais des Congres, both of which seat 3,500 to 4,000, these educational productions have drawn thousands who never set foot in a theater before.

His work continues that of such forerunners as Firmin Gémier and Jean Vilar, who similarly sought to provide the masses with instructive entertainment. In his presentation method he comhines crowd scenes, living tableaux, a trace of television spectacle and of light and sound exhibits with musical accompaniment, audience participation and a dash of the circus. Hossein began his experiments with an impressive theatrical fresco of the 1905 mutiny on the Russian warship Potemkin, in-spired by Eisenstein's famous film. Then came a dramatic musical of "Les Miserables" (which under other directorial hands has had huge success in London and New York); a passion play, "A Man Named Jesus," and Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar." This season he seized on an early 19th-century melodrama, "L'Affaire du Courrier de Lyon." based on a celebrated miscarriage of justice. He revised it into a courtroom trial as a protest against capital punishment, call-ing upon a hundred spectators each evening to serve as jurors. They voted for acquittal every time, which delighted him. Sturdily built, dark-haired and bullishly determined, he resemhles more a pugilist in training than the 60-year-old theatrical vi-sionary he is. He is about to leap into a demanding adventure: a two-part epic for the bicentenary of the French Revolution. "The idea grew from a proposed television serial oo the Revolution, from the storming of the Bastille to the execution of Robespierre," he said, speaking volubly about his plans. "I wrote the script with Alain Decaux of the French Academy and Daniel Boulanger. I wanted international stars to play certain roles (Meryl Streep for Marie Antoinette). It was budgeted at three hundred million francs [about $52 million]. But when the television board learned that I would require two years of shooting and that the film would be ready only m 1990 - too late for the celebration - they decided to buy our script and put four directors to work simultaneously on different sections.

"So I began another dramati-zation of the Revolution for a stage spectacle, collaborating with Decaux, Georges Soria and Stellio Lorenzi and with introductions for certain scenes by Marcel Julian. It is called 'Liberty or Death' and it is scheduled to open at the Palais des Congrès on Nov. 18. The huge panorama will include the leading personalities of the Revolution with biographies of each. It will be as objective as possible, a historical evaluation, not a propaganda piece.

"The spectators will be offered may change their badges as they wish during the performance. Diderot once asked a haunting question: Should one generation be sacrificed for the benefit of future generations? The abiding theme of the drama is the necessi ty of establishing the Rights of Man, a problem still with us. "Rehearsals begin in August and I am now casting a company of two hundred." On Jan. 20 badges to denote allegiance to one party or another and they

1989 - one day short of the anniversary of the execution of Louis XVI in 1793 - there will be a gala performance to be attended by the European Parliament. "Liberty or Death" constitutes the first half of the mammoth saga. The second part, "The Heritage of the Revolution," will follow on Sept. 20, 1989, to illustrate the fight for freedom, sprung from the seeds of the French Revolution, during the subsequent two centuries. It will include film footage of both World Wars, General de Gaulle's declaration of June 18, 1940, Churchill's denunciations of Hitler's tyranny and a fictitious suicide resistance mission in which men give their lives so that others can be free. Bernard Buffet has designed the posters for both spectacles.

Hossein's ambition is to move andiences with fundamental issues and to treat human problems sympathetically. He wants audiences to take an active part in what is happening before them and not attend as passive witnesses. His literary idols are Victor Hugo and, smong the moderns, John Steinbeck and Andre Malraux. The early Capra screen comedies with their humorous, understanding and humanity are among his favorites.

Aside from his socially conscious, large-scale productions, he continues to act occasionally, having recently toured with his wife — Candice Paton — in a two-character play. For Jean-Paul Belmondo he staged the Dumas-Sartre melodrama "Kean" to public and critical acclaim.

Capable of carning immense sums for his work, be seems indifferent to amassing a personal for-tune. He lives modestly in a simple flat. He gave his profits on the Jesus pageant to charitable organizations and he does not rely on the government subsidies, finding his own financing for production. Furthermore, he has subsidized six young companies himself. He written a book on this theories, "As a Last Resort," published by Plon. "About 'Les Misèrables.' " he said, "the composer and the lyricists came to me with the score and words to consult on devising a spectacle. The staging was my conception and it had great success in France. When it was reproduced in London and New York, becoming a theatrical triumph of the decade, certain de-tails were altered, but the general presentation is based on mine, though aside from a squib in the New York program I have received no thanks or credit or even a bouquet of flowers for my

Summing up his views on his work, he declared, "I believe that theater can instruct through entertainment, stimulating the minds by confrontation with dramas that convey fundamental values." Then he added, "Come to the rehearsals and see how we are progressing."

Ketchem had used the name Patrick Quinn to appear on the show, which was seen by an Alaskan banker who recognized Ketchern as the man who allegedly ran up about $25,000 in debts in Alaska by fraudulently obtaming credit cards. Ketchem was arrested when be tried to pick up $58,600 in winnings from his appearance on "Password." The sum would have been the show's biggest single-game award, but NBC refused to pay it on the grounds that Ketchem won under a false identity. John F. Kennedy would have supported his defense secretary, Robert McNamara, to succeed him in order to keep Lyndon Johnson out of the White House, according to a new book, "Robert Kennedy: In His Own Words," based on heretofore unpublished interviews Robert Kennedy gave between 1964 and 1967. Excerpts appear in the current Newsweck magazine. The book is scheduled for release in June, marking the 20th anniversary of Robert Kennedy's assassination. Speaking of Johnson, Robert Ken-nedy said: "In every conversation I have with him he lies. . . . He lies even when he doesn't have to." Kennedy, who remained as attorney general a short while after his brother was assassinated in 1963. described Johnson as "mean, bitter, vicious - an animal in many ways." The interviews were given as part of an oral history program for the John F. Kennedy Library.

Maya Shrago, a 6-year-old Soviet girl from Odessa, underwent surgery to mend a hole in her heart. Doctors at the Deborah Heart and Lung Center in Browns Mills, New Jersey, said she could be released within 10 days. "By Saturday, she should be running around the halls and if everythins going the way it should, in 10 days she can go and visit her Uncle Boris in New York,"
